

I took new screenshots and noticed that Windows adds a stupid black stripe to the top edge in the window title bar - see screenshot. This didn't happen before. I think this appeared in 24H2. At least on another PC with 21H2 everything is ok in this regard.

The strangest thing is that there seems to be no such thing for its native Windows applications. But this appears in third-party apps like Total Commander or my .NET apps.

So when you take screenshots, keep this point in mind. Now you also need to finish this moment manually in Paint.

